DRAINAGE BIG PROBLEM MOST COUNTY FARMS

The Adams County Soil Conservation district found during 1949 that the big problem on most Adams county farms is drainage and consequently an important part of its work last year was devoted to solving surface drainage problems. The annual report of the two-year-old district for 1949 has just been released.

"Because of the characteristics of certain soil types, it is impractical to construct a system of underground drains, for in many of the soils, water will not find its way to drains more than two feet away," the report explains. "Hence the problem has resolved itself into the use of surface drainage such as sod waterways, diversion terraces, open ditches and other means."

The district now has established major soil and water conservation practices on 1,653 acres of Adams county farmland that had drainage problems. Plans for conservation practices have been made for a total of 6,728 acres, the report shows.

Sixteen Ponds Built
Cover cropping practices have been established on 878 acres and plans made for such practices on a total of 4,234 acres. Strip cropping is now followed on 1,225 acres. Sixteen farm ponds have been established. Tree planting work has been carried out on 544 acres. A mile and a quarter of terraces have been built with nearly 13 miles planned.

Field diversion trenches built last year total over 10 miles and 499 acres of farm land have received drainage attention. Nearly eight miles of closed or covered drains have been installed and about an equal amount of open drains laid out.

Tying in with the goal of erosion control and proper drainage, the report states that "practically every orchard set out this year in Adams county, especially those where erosion might be a problem, have been laid out with the assistance of district technicians."

One or more conservation practices have been established on 120 farm plan projects in Adams county. The district has received a total of 267 applications from farmers and fruitmen asking conservation plans for their properties.

STUDENT LOANS ADVOCATED BY LIONS SPEAKER

The suggestion that service clubs and other community groups set up a scholarship loan fund as a means of helping young people of this community "develop their talents to the utmost" was made in a talk Monday evening before the Gettysburg Lions club by Harvey Heintzelman, chief of the occupational information and guidance division of the state Department of Public Instruction.

Speaking of the complexity of the employment situation in a country which offers more than 40,000 "separate and distinct types" of employment, the speaker discussed the "tremendous problem" of making the best use of human talents and energies by getting men and women into jobs for which they are best fitted.

Reports On Surveys

He reported on the results of school surveys indicating that more young people are preparing for professional and managerial positions than will find opportunities in those fields. Another survey showed that children of professional and skilled fathers fixed 84 cents an hour as the wage they will demand in their first job while children of unskilled workers expect starting wages of $1.30 an hour.

The importance of vocational guidance work at the community level was emphasized by Mr. Heintzelman.

President Donald M. Swope presided at the meeting with more than 100 members and guests in attendance. Guests included three Lions from Taneytown and six from Union Bridge, Md. Dr. Robert Hand was introduced as a new member at the session held at the Shetter House.

Hundreds Seek Information And Literature From Local Chamber; Plan To Wed Here

Since January 1 the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce has received and answered more than 400 inquiries from nearly all sections of the United States on a wide variety of subjects ranging from requests for tourist information to details on how to get married in Gettysburg.

Several letters have been received by the Chamber, according to Mrs. Helen Snyder, secretary, asking details on the procedure required in obtaining marriage licenses, and the names of local ministers.

The ministers do not necessarily have to be members of the Chamber of Commerce to have their names furnished to prospective brides and bridegrooms who want to get married and begin their honeymoons in this historical shrine, but in most other cases, information is supplied only on business places and firms who are members.

Ask Date For Speeches

From three widely separated states have come requests for data on Gettysburg to be used in making speeches. The "orators" apparently want their information to be bona fide, direct from the source. One such request came from Oregon. One from Wisconsin and another from Oklahoma. In the latter instance, it was a study club which wrote asking about the battlefield and the town.

U.S. Breaks Relations With Bulgaria; Order Heath Home

Washington, Feb. 21 (AP)—The United States broke diplomatic relations today with Communist Bulgaria.

American Minister Donald R. Heath and other U. S. representatives in Sofia were ordered home.

The break climaxes a dispute with Bulgaria over communist attacks on Heath and a demand from the Bulgarian government for his recall. Bulgaria was directed to withdraw its small diplomatic mission in Washington. Its legation here is headed now by Dr. Peter Voutov, charge d'affaires.

It is the first time the United States has broken diplomatic relations with any nation since the war.

The U. S. decision was communicated to the Bulgarian government at Sofia yesterday. Voutov was summoned to the State Department today and informed of the action. He was directed to make arrangements to leave the United States with other members of the legation and their families.

After talking with Llewellyn Thompson, deputy assistant secretary for European affairs, Voutov told reporters "I think the break is complete." He said there are 12 members of the legation staff, including dependents, and that all probably would leave early in March.

The State Department said Thompson told Voutov the United States expected Bulgaria would facilitate the departure of the American group. Voutov said he assumed this would be done.

Miners' Defiance Endangers Entire Treasury Of UMW

Washington, Feb. 21 (AP)—The entire treasury of the striking coal miners, variously figured at $13,000,000 to $20,000,000, was endangered today by their defiance of a court order once again to end a coal strike.

Reports from the coal fields showed a spirit of rebellious indifference to the situation. The United Mine Workers—but not President John L. Lewis personally—was cited for contempt of court here yesterday by Judge Richmond B. Keech, who had issued the back-to-work order.

The union was given until Friday to clear itself of contempt by getting the 372,000 idle miners back to work. Union lawyers were told to explain Friday, if the men are still out.

That didn't seem to bother the miners. They expressed such comments in the Pennsylvania fields as, "nobody is going to pay any attention to a contempt citation." Another: "Let them fine us until our money is gone."

Mine disorders were reported, especially in eastern Kentucky. If the union doesn't comply with the back to work order by Friday, to the satisfaction of the court, it will mean a hearing next Monday before Judge Keech. The UMW could be fined any amount the judge deems proper. If still out next Monday the strikers will have been in defiance of the court order for two weeks. The order was renewed yesterday until March 3.

The union paid $2,130,000 in two fines for similar scrapes with the courts in 1946 and 1948. Judge Keech could wipe out the UMW's rich holdings, built from almost nothing since 1933. These assets of high bank accounts, four valuable office buildings only a couple of blocks from the White House, bonds and bank stocks.

PSEA BRANCH PLANS ANNUAL DINNER MEET

The annual spring dinner-meeting of the Adams county branch of the Pennsylvania State Education association will be held in the New Oxford area on April 17, the executive committee of the county branch decided Monday afternoon at a meeting held in the office of the county superintendent of schools.

Herbert Raab, Gettysburg R. D., a teacher in the Lower Adams schools at New Oxford, was chosen as chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner session. He was authorized to select his own committee. The meeting follows the custom set up by the county branch of holding sessions in different parts of the county, so that eventually all of the county districts will have acted as host to the organization.

The two delegates elected by the county branch to represent it at the state meetings were designated to represent the branch at a conference on teacher education and professional standards to be held at Hershey, March 10. The delegates are George Inskip, supervising principal of the Fairfield joint school system, and Charles C. Taylor, supervising principal of the Lower Adams joint system. In addition the group plans to name one additional delegate to the Hershey conference.

Leslie V. Stock, supervising principal of the Upper Adams schools and chairman of the county branch's legislation committee, reported on two bills now before congress. One bill would provide for the teacher retirement systems in states to be taken over by the Federal social security bureau. Stock said the PSEA is opposing the measure because social security would give smaller benefits than the present teacher retirement plan and that, if the bill passes, teachers would lose much of what they have already paid into their own retirement fund.

Another bill being considered by congress pertains to the allocation of Federal funds which could be used to aid in building schools. The plan is apparently being given considerable favorable attention in congress, Stock noted.

News Collected At Random

James B. Aumen, president of the Gettysburg Fire company, former assistant superintendent of the battlefield and now retired, today telephoned The Gettysburg Times to add his endorsement of the re-naming of Center square as LINCOLN SQUARE.

"I am 100 per cent in favor of naming our square LINCOLN SQUARE. I think it is one of the finest things we can do, to honor the memory of Abraham Lincoln."

"I am also 100 per cent in favor of erecting a statue of Lincoln in the center plot. This should have been done many years ago. Now it seems that we are on the right track and we should not stop. We should start immediately and erect the finest Lincoln statue we can buy."

"Don't let any opposition to these movements discourage you. Just keep on going and you'll have plenty of support not only in Gettysburg but all over the state and from the millions of visitors who come here each year," Mr. Aumen said.

Mr. Aumen led a movement to raise more than $2,000 to beautify the center plot some years ago. His committee purchased the finest shrubbery available and for many years, when it was properly cared for, the center plot attracted much attention and favorable comment. It was a thing of beauty the year 'round.

Several months ago Bruce Fitz, Waynesboro watch repairman, attended the Seibert auction sale near Fairfield. He purchased a Waterbury clock "for a song." Wedged in the works was a tiny book, 256 pages, a history of the Bible. The book fits comfortably in the palm of a baby's hand, measuring only 2 x 1 1/4 x 3/4 inches. It was printed in 1813.

ROBT. VOGELER GIVEN 15 YEARS ON SPY CHARGE

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 21 (AP)—American businessman Robert A. Vogeler was sentenced to 15 years in prison today on spy charges by a Hungarian court which sentenced two of his six co-defendants to death.

Death sentences were meted out to Imre Geiger, manager of the International Telephone and Telegraph company's Budapest branch, and Zoltan Rado, former department chief in Hungary's Ministry of Heavy Industry.

Edgar Sanders, Vogeler's British aide in the I. T. & T. branch, the Standard Electric Works, was sentenced to 13 years in prison.

Geiger, Rado and the other defendants all are Hungarian nationals. The court sentenced the Rev. Istvan Justh, a Roman Catholic priest, and Klemen Domokos, accountant in the Standard company, to 10 years. Edina Doery, a barmaid, was given a five-year term.

Claimed He Spied for U. S.

Vogeler, 38, assistant vice president of the I. T. & T., and the other six defendants had confessed to charges of ferreting out Hungarian economic and industrial secrets on instructions of the American Intelligence Service, of sabotaging the productive capacity of the standard firm to harm Hungarian economy, and of sabotaging deliveries to the Soviet Union and east European Communist countries.

Vogeler, Sanders and the five Hungarians had pleaded guilty to the charges and had made abject statements to the court.

United States Minister Nathaniel Davis had been barred from visiting Vogeler and Sanders during their three months in custody. Immediately after the sentencing he called a news conference for 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST).

Had Asked Death

In New York, Paul Ruedemann, a Standard Oil company of New Jersey executive who was expelled by Hungary in September, 1948, after signing a sabotage confession, commented:

"... In Hungary today a man can be forced to 'confess' because he sees nothing else to do. He is confined in a dungeon with no hope of getting out unless he does confess. He is deprived of food and water questioned constantly, brought to such mental and physical exhaustion that anything—even prison—seems better than what he is going through."

The prosecution had demanded the severest penalty—presumably death—but the court said it had taken his plea for leniency under consideration.

Says 3-Day Week Not Enough For Demand
New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—Three days of digging "in this weather" is not enough to meet market demands declared a spokesman for the anthracite industry.

Edward Griffith, president of the Glen Alden Coal company, Scranton, Pa., made the statement yesterday after another "no progress" bargaining session with United Mine Workers officials.

"When we get a contract, that will be relieved," was the Union's answer, given by Mart F. Brennan.

Taking note of the cold weather in the northeastern section of the country and Canada, where the anthracite mines sell most of their coal, Griffith said: "In this weather we can't supply the area on the three-day work week. Naturally zero weather is bound to bring shortages. With the exception of rice and pea coal, we have no reserves and nothing more than is coming out of the mines each day."

The U. S. Department of Agriculture says stores selling pre-packaged meat increased from 400 to 1,200 in 1949.

Trojan-Warrior Tilt Here Tonight Will Draw Throng

An over-flow crowd is expected to witness the Chambersburg-Gettysburg high school basketball game here this evening which may determine the South Penn league champion.

Chambersburg needs a victory to clinch its seventh straight title. A win for Gettysburg would mean a deadlock between the teams for the second half honors necessitating a playoff. Still another playoff would be needed in the event Gettysburg captured the second half title inasmuch as the Trojans have already won the first half honors.

The Trojans will bring a tall, well-seasoned team here headed by Mike Waters, all-conference guard a year ago. Coach Schlechter's team has lost but two games this season, one to the alumni and the other to Waynesboro. In a game at Chambersburg January 24 the Trojans laced the Warriors 62-35.

Tonight's game will mark the final home appearance of six senior squad members: Ken Deardoff, Leo Kuhn, Bob Krick, Chet Cornwell, Martin Myers and Bobby Sachs. The regular season will be ended Friday with a game at Westminster.

At 6:45 o'clock this evening the jayvee teams will play.

After running up a 16-4 lead in the first period there was never any doubt as to the outcome. The Biglerville reserves netted 25 points in the final half to win the preliminary game 33-28.

New Oxford also gained a tie for second place by disposing of East Berlin 30-14 on the East Berlin floor. The winners took a 12-3 lead in the opening quarter to maintain a safe lead until the finish. In the preliminary game the East Berlin reserves won 25-4.

Newville and Bolling Springs divided a doubleheader at Bolling Springs, the Newville varsity winning 41-22 while the Bubble reserves took the preliminary 29-19.

He hopes to select two schools from the western part of the state and two from the east for the playoffs to determine the team which will travel to Kansas City next month.

DUQUESNE HAS BEST MARK FOR STATE QUINTS

(By The Associated Press)
With the basketball season entering its final weeks, the battle for the mythical Pennsylvania collegiate title shapes up between once-beaten Duquesne and twice-whipped Millersville, West Chester Teachers and Westminster.

Duquesne, hoping for a bid to either the National Collegiate Athletic association or the national invitational tournament, has chalked up 20 victories. The only defeat was by Louisville.

West Chester, playing schools in its own class, has won 11 games. The defeats were by Albright and Moravian. Westminster has compiled 17 triumphs in 19 starts.

Along with Duquesne, Villanova and LaSalle are still in running for a post-season tournament bid—either the NCAA or the invitation affair at Madison Square Garden.

Westminster and Waynesburg (10-4) also have their eyes on tournament competition. They are members of the National Association of Intercollegiate Basketball, which plays its post season championship tourney at Kansas City.

Pennsylvania will be represented by one school at Kansas City. W. Howard Yost, athletic director of the Lock Haven Teachers and chairman of District 30 of the NAIB, has indicated there'll probably be a playoff in Pennsylvania.

He hopes to select two schools from the western part of the state and two from the east for the playoffs to determine the team which will travel to Kansas City next month.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—At least one Brooklyn holdout, that of left fielder Gene Hermanski, appears to be the real thing. Gene says he will go to Vero Beach on March 1 for a final showdown with Branch Rickey, and if no agreement is reached will turn right around and go back to Ft. Lauderdale to sit it out. . . . The New York Giants, having divested themselves of much excess suet by sale and trade, are passing up the Buckhorn baths near Phoenix this spring. . . . They claim that $14,000 already is in the till for the Ezzard Charles-Fredde Beshore heavy-weight title bout at Buffalo a week from tonight.

Joe Dobson, Boston Red Sox pitcher, told a Hartford gathering the other night that Yogi Berra of the Yankees is the toughest man in the American league to pitch to. "He's dangerous because he'll hit anything he can reach," Dobson explained. "If he can reach it he's apt to slam it a mile." . . . Word received here from the west coast is that the Rose Bowl contract with the Big Ten will be renewed for another five years. . . . Coast grid bugs do not like the clause which prevents a mid-west team from playing at Pasadena oftener than every fourth year, but otherwise it has proved a fine deal.

Every member of the Bradley cage team, No. 1 in national rankings, is from Illinois. Paul Unruh, the team's main all-America candidate, holds the Bradley 440-yard dash record at 49.7. Also, he is a footballer of considerable talent. . . . Pitcher Vic Raschi of the Yankees, who obtained a degree in physical education at William and Mary last year, is thinking of doing a hitch in the graduate school. . . . George Sauer is slightly bewildered by they say, at the way he became Baylor's new athletic director. While being interviewed about the head coaching job, the ex-Navy mentor casually asked who they had in mind for director. The reply was that the school hoped to find someone who would want both jobs. Said George: "Gentlemen, you have found your man. When do I start?"

BRADLEY TAKES LEAD IN NATION

New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—Bradley university broke Holy Cross' five-week grip on the position and moved in today as the nation's No. 1 basketball team.

The dashing lads from Peoria, Ill., although beaten three times, won solid support from all sections of the country to amass 1,269 points in the weekly Associated Press poll.

This gave them a 135-point edge over undefeated Holy Cross although the Crusaders from Worcester, Mass., still commanded the largest number of first place votes—44 compared with 28 for the new leader.

Here's the new rundown: Bradley, Holy Cross, Ohio State, Duquesne, Kentucky, St. John's, UCLA, Western Kentucky, North Carolina State and Long Island university.

Duquesne, beaten only once in 22 games, climbed from seventh to fourth. UCLA moved to the vacated spot from tenth and Western Kentucky graduated a notch.

St. John's of Brooklyn fell from No. 4 to No. 6. Long Island university tumbled from sixth. North Carolina State dropped one rung.

On Douglas' heels were three other members of the Cleveland club—all bunched one point apart. Fred Thurier and Pete Leswick held the No. 2 spot with 73 points each with Bob Carse a step behind at 72 points.

The National Geographic Society says the average elevation of Tibet is greater than that of Mt. Whitney, highest point in the U. S.

Page's signing for an estimated $30,000 plus indicated George Weiss, Yank general manager, is in a generous mood. George had little trouble once he sat down to talk with the 32-year-old left-hander who pitched 60 games last season. "It only took about 10 minutes," said Page yesterday. "It was my best ever. It even surprised me."

Page turned back one contract from his Springdale, Pa. home. That was supposed to have called for only a slight increase on last year's reported $20,000. Estimates on the new agreement run from $30,000 to $35,000, making him the best paid pitcher in Yankee history and certainly the best paid reliever anywhere, anytime.

Houston, Feb. 21 (AP)—Qualifying play began today for the $10,000 Houston open golf tournament but fans were occupied with a problem over a hometown favorite. It is a toss-up whether colorful Jimmy Demaret or his former pupil, young Jackie Burke, Jr., will be top choice by the time the 72-holes of medal play begin Thursday.

Grand Junction, Tenn., Feb. 21 (AP)—Lebanon Betty, bird dog owned by G. D. Coleman of Lebanon, Pa., gets her first chance today in the national field trial championship.

Betty is paired with Tip Top Bob, the property of E. J. Laney, Daytona Beach, Fla., in the morning hunt. She is one of 31 champion bird dogs seeking national laurels.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

WORDS OF FAITH

We cannot, with confidence, enter a single day without faith. We must have faith to walk but a single step. Faith in ourselves and faith in the one Supreme Ruler of the universe. Faith in the foundation stone to every structure of character.

Only those of great faith have achieved anything worth while. We read the words of those who have written inspiring, and they inspire us in turn. Look upon the completed work of any enterprise and you can be sure that faith did the job.

I had great admiration for the late Dr. Joseph Fort Newton. He was an inspiring speaker and writer, and seemed to be gifted to an unusual degree, with the ability to make words inspire one's faith. He had wide influence during a long life of service. Fortunately, he left words behind that will continue to help men and women strengthen their faith and radiate it to others.

No one can sincerely read the New Testament without having his faith strengthened every time that it is read. No human utterance has ever exceeded, in spiritual grandeur, the "Sermon on the Mount."

All we need words of faith to give us a lift, and to inspire us on. In scores of books that have become my favorites, I find these words, and return to them again and again: Stevenson, Dr. Osler, Michael Fairless, Abraham Lincoln, Albert Schweitzer, Fulton Oursler, Thoreau, and so many others, whose writings and expressions are filled with the substance of faith.

To words of faith that have been stored in the mind and heart, thousands owe their success, their happiness, and their influence. How very many of us live by those words. Those words of confidence and love that often come to us unexpectedly, are the ones that spur us most, and so often when most needed. To words of faith we owe all that we are!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "The Old Rocking Chair."

PANCAKE DAY

"This day ask pardon for your sins; Tomorrow morning Lent begins." Now many years have passed away since that I heard my mother say.

Shrove Tuesday, in the English way, was known to us as "pancake day." For pancakes browned and sugared sweet.

"Today be merry while you may," I still can hear the mother say. "Be humble and contrite of heart; Tomorrow morning Lent will start."

'Tis just a memory after all: An English home, a youngster small; The table grace I still repeat. And all the pancakes I could eat.

SAYS TRIO RUNS
SPY RING WITHIN
U.S. STATE DEPT.

By JACK BELL

Washington, Feb. 21 (AP)—A Republican senator's charges that two men and a woman make up a "big three" directing a spy ring in the State Department headed today for an investigation by the Senate foreign relations committee.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, told reporters he will propose that the committee look into accusations made by Senator McCarthy (R.-Wis.) that 81 Communists either have or now work for the department.

McCarthy, who described these individuals from supposedly secret files in a five-hour Senate speech last night, said he would give their names to such a committee. He didn't give any in his speech.

Refused Names

In a running word battle with Lucas, the Wisconsin senator refused in his Senate speech to tell who he suspects of being members of what he described as "an espionage ring in the State Department."

As an off-shoot, McCarthy said at one point that a member of a communist front organization who failed to get security clearance in the State Department had turned up as a White House speech writer.

Without naming the individual, he said he has a relative with a financial interest in the Daily Worker, communist paper.

Fishing out photographs of records from a large brief case, McCarthy told the Senate, however, that the ouster of the "big three" would break the back of the reputed spy ring.

Minister Shadowed

The most important member of this trio was described by McCarthy as "one of our foreign ministers" who is holding "one of the most important listening posts in Europe."

He said this man had been shadowed and was found to have been in contact with a Soviet agent who in turn was followed to a Soviet embassy in an unnamed country there, and that material was turned over to the embassy.

As his "Case No. 1" McCarthy listed an individual he said now is working in the office of an assistant Secretary of State.

He said this man was shadowed by a federal intelligence agent in 1946 and was found to be in contact with an espionage agent. McCarthy said this individual got State Department jobs for two communists who later were fired.

The third member of the trio, a woman, was described by McCarthy as a former top official of the department's office of international education, which handles the foreign-beamed Voice of America broadcasts.

McCarthy's recital of his information came in an uproarious session that twice saw the sergeant at arms dispatched to round up absent senators.

Once Lucas tried to end the McCarthy recital by moving to adjourn. The motion lost by an 18 to 16 vote. Senators Mundt (R.-S.D.) and Ferguson (R.-Mich.) frequently pitched in to help McCarthy. Senator Lodge (R.-Mass.) said he would move to have a Senate foreign relations subcommittee investigate the charges.

STUDENT KISS
STARTS BATTLE IN OKLAHOMA

Bethany, Okla., Feb. 21 (AP)—A kiss is not just a kiss in Bethany.

It's the object of school rules which ban the practice in public. That's the big reason five high school students were expelled indefinitely yesterday. A court battle may even be brewing.

Riddell Riggs, 16, stole the forbidden kiss Thursday night at a basketball game as he crowned pretty 16-year-old Charlotte McClain "Basketball Sweetheart."

That electrified this town of 2,500 just west of Oklahoma City, where the Church of the Nazarene dominates. Public kissing is in the same class with smoking, beer drinking, school dances and women wearing shorts. In short, it isn't done.

A similar queen-kissing incident in 1948 resulted in a picture of the ceremonies being banned from the yearbook.

So anticipating punishment, about 30 students walked out of classes Friday. The rebellion swelled, not just to the no-kissing rule, but to the entire set of school regulations.

Now a court fight may be in the making, for about 250 parents have taken up the kids' battle. They met last night and charged the school is ruled by one religious sect and that students who don't belong to that faith are discriminated against.

The church operates Bethany-Peniel college here. The college is not involved in the affair.

The Citizens' committee organized Sunday has retained Attorney Fred L. Sikes, who says they will seek dismissal of the high school principal, Mrs. Alonzo Norwood.

"If we can't get any action from the school board," he asserted, "we will go to the State Board of Education. And if we can't get action there, we will go to court." The board meets tonight.

Cow Tester's Report--

The report of the Dairy Herd Improvement association for January by Paul Leas, Jr., and R. B. Stauffer, testers, follows:

There were 26 herds tested, with 28 days worked; 490 cows in milk; 149 cows dry; 11 sold for non-dairy purposes; 14 cows bought; 51 records reported on 718 cards; 158 cows produced over 40 pounds of fat; 66 cows produced over 50 pounds of fat; 166 cows produced over 1,000 pounds of milk, and 97 cows produced over 1,200 pounds of milk.

CONFLICT OVER ISMS SWELLS IN FAR EAST AREA

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

With the conflict of the isms in Europe largely settled down to a holding operation, the weight of strife is shifting to the far eastern theatre of our two-front war.

In the long run the outcome of the fight between Communism and democracy may depend largely on what happens in that vast Asiatic area which houses something more than half the population of the world.

The big question of the moment is what aid the nations of Southeast Asia are likely to get from the West to enable them to stand up against the great Communist offensive which already has overrun China militarily. When we talk of Western aid we of course have Uncle Sam in mind. Most of the load is on his shoulders.

Recommendations for American aid, made by the recent conference of U. S. diplomats in Bangkok, are still under consideration in Washington. Then Bangkok decisions provided that the U. S. A. give arms and economic aid to Southeast Asia nations if their people show a will to fight the Red threat to their independence.

However, that referred to material aid. No American troops would be sent.

In short, the Bangkok conference would bolster Southeast Asia somewhat after the fashion of the successful Marshall Plan in Europe. The State Department already has funds and military supplies upon which it could draw for this purpose.

South Korea Serious
The conference came to the conclusion that the Chinese Communists, were likely to invade hotly disputed Indochina but instead would supply the Red rebels in Indochina with military equipment. The Communist leader, Ho Chi Minh, is reported to have plenty of men and so needs no soldiers from China.

One of the most important points to come out of the Bangkok conference is the decision that the position of the South Korean republic is serious. Northern Korea is under Russian domination and has been trying to engineer a Communist revolution in Southern Korea.

Should Southern Korea go Communist it would create a grave threat to Japan, which is America's chief base in the Orient. In this connection it should not be forgotten that Russia's control of Korea was one of the chief causes of the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-5. Why? Because Nippon regarded the Korean peninsula as "a dagger pointed at her heart." In short, Korea is of great strategic importance.

WOULD BOOST USE OF MILK

Harrisburg, Feb. 21 (AP)—Raising the consumption of milk just a little would take the product off the price support program, says a spokesman for the industry.

"If milk consumption last year had been increased by only eight per cent the government would not have been required to buy a pound of milk products," said W. A. Wentworth, director of industry relations for the Borden company.

Wentworth told the 18th annual convention of the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers here yesterday that the industry must inform the public that milk "is the greatest of all food values and at the lowest cost per pound."

"Far greater consumption of milk must be brought about for the promotion of better health of the public and for the assurance of a stable economy for the farmer," he added. The concluding session will be held here today.

J. F. Garber, of Lancaster, was elected president of the association last night succeeding H. V. Jones of Scranton. Other officers elected included George J. Hauptfuhrer, Philadelphia; Floyd Mather, Williamsport, and Robert G. Morgart, Johnstown, all vice presidents; Daniel S. Adams, Reading, secretary; Benjamin H. Wolfe, Harrisburg, treasurer, and Benjamin G. Eynon, Harrisburg, executive vice president.

Opportunities For Education in AAF

High school graduates who enlist in the U. S. Air Force will have many opportunities to continue their education, Sgt. Richard Taylor, local recruiting officer, announced today.

The Air Force is placing emphasis upon educational standards because so much of the work calls for highly developed skills and higher intelligence. The intelligence and educational level of the average Air Force recruit today exceeds that of any large military organization in history, due to the many opportunities available through correspondence courses, attending nearby colleges during off-duty hours, and through group instruction at Air Force bases.

Sgt. Taylor said. In all three methods, the Air Force pays a substantial part of the cost.

During the first weeks of training, a recruit is given aptitude tests, followed by a personal interview with a skilled vocational guidance counselor. On the basis of his test scores and personal interests, he is assigned to an Air Force Specialty, and upon completion of basic training, assigned to an Air Force base for apprenticeship work in his specialty. As vacancies exist, he is further assigned to an Air Force Technical school for training in his chosen career. Having successfully completed his specialized course, the airman follows steady advancement through a combination of experiences acquired.

Information concerning Air Force careers is available at the U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station, second floor of the post office, Hanover.

Drivers 16 to 20 years old are involved in five times as many accidents as drivers in the 45-to-50 age group.

Facts About '49 Income Tax Reports

HUSBANDS AND WIVES

(Editor's Note: This is the seventh of 12 stories explaining who must do what and how about 1949 income tax returns.)

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Feb. 21 (AP)—Married couples, in choosing the right form for their 1949 income tax return, have a problem slightly different from that of single taxpayers.

For instance, what form for a joint return, or a difference in deductions? And the married couples in community property states have still another kind of problem.

Remember, there are three forms on which returns can be made. Form 1040-A—the easiest, with the collector figuring the tax for you; the 1040 short form—next easy, where you find your own tax in a table on the back; and the 1040 long form—where you figure your own tax.

Here's A Point

Remember, this, too: Form 1040-A is for the under-$5,000 who had the full tax, or most of it, withheld from their wages or salary in 1949. The 1040 short form is for the under-$5,000 people who can't use form 1040-A.

Before looking at examples of who can use what forms, here's a point:

If you use form 1040-A or the 1040 short form you get, without asking or itemizing, a deduction of about 10 per cent for personal expenses like hospital bills or charitable contributions. But with those two forms you can't claim more than 10 per cent. If yours were more than that, then use the 1040 long form. There you'll have to itemize but you can claim your deductions in full.

And—if one partner in a marriage wants to claim more than a 10 per cent deduction and therefore uses the 1040 long form to itemize, the other partner has to use the 1040 long form, too, and itemize.

More On Forms

Now for the use of the forms. You can use form 1040-A only if your total income was under $5,000 and all of it—except for no more than $100 in untaxed wages, interest or dividends—was in wages or salary from which full tax was withheld in 1949.

If you don't fit that rule, but your income was under $5,000, you can use the 1040 short form. Examples: If full tax was withheld from your salary but you had $100 of other untaxed income in wages, dividends or interest, you could use form 1040-A. If that other untaxed income in wages, interest or dividends amounted to $101, you'd use the 1040 short form.

Cite Some Examples

If you had any income at all from other sources, like rent or farming, no matter how small it was and even though the total income was under $5,000, you couldn't use form 1040-A. You'd use the 1040 short form.

Jones and his wife had under-$5,000 income. It was all his. She had no income. If they fit the rule for form 1040-A, they can file jointly on it. Otherwise, they can file separately on the 1040 short form.

Smith and his wife had under-$5,000. Both earned part of that income. His fit the rule for using form 1040-A but hers didn't. In that case they can file jointly on the 1040 short form, but not on form 1040-A. If for some special reason they wish to do so, he can file separately on form 1040-A while she files separately on the 1040 short form.

Get Usual Deduction

In that case each claims his own $600 exemption and each gets the usual 10 per cent deduction allowed a person filing a return of his own. Brown and his wife had total income of $5,000 or more but, individually, the income of each was under $5,000. What do they do?

They can file jointly on the 1040 long form, getting the benefit that comes from splitting their income equally, or they can file separately on form 1040-A (if they fit the rule for it) or separately on the 1040 short form.

Community Property States
Kelly and his wife had $5,000 or more income. It was all his, she had none. They have no choice of forms. They can't use form 1040-A or the 1040 short form. They must use the 1040 long form. There they can file a joint return. From a money-saving standpoint, it wouldn't make sense in a case where the husband had income and the wife none, for the wife to fail to file jointly with her husband and lose the benefit of split income.

Now for community property states: They are Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas and Washington.

In those states, if husband and wife wish to file separate returns, they can't use form 1040-A at all. They must use form 1040, either the short or long forms, depending on the size of their income.

(Next: Using form 1040-A.)

Mating Of Geese

The wild gander does not believe in bigamy; he likes to mate with just one goose, but a young gander can be mated with two geese. Toulouse and Emden geese (Emden geese are used for pelts as mentioned in a previous pointer) do not mature before their third year. Since second year eggs are usually infertile they should be used for cooking. The length of maturing time does not matter too much, when one considers that females can be kept up to 10 years of age, while males should not be kept for more than seven years for breeding. It is very difficult to distinguish sex in geese, particularly when they are young. The ganders have shrill, high voices, and usually are a bit larger than their sisters, which have a harsh and coarse voice.

Geese have to be managed very gently, because they can be disturbed very easily. When mated they can be allowed to run in flocks. However each mating should be kept by itself during the breeding season on account of the ganders' fighting spirit. Two to three feet high fences will keep geese confined in large enough yards. It is advisable when handling setting geese to wear gloves to protect your hands from bites.

When geese start laying eggs they should be collected daily, otherwise the goose becomes broody too early. If this advice is followed, it will take a long time before they become broody. Therefore it is best to have a heavy chicken sit on not more than seven goose eggs. Geese can sit on 10 to 14 eggs. It takes the small brood of geese about 30 days, and the larger ones about 35 days to hatch. After the 15th day, you should soak the eggs every three days for half a minute in hot water of 100 degrees Fahrenheit. It is advisable to soak the eggs daily during the last week of incubation. When using the goose for sitting she should be allowed to use the nest in which she laid her eggs, because it is more than difficult to make her set in another place. Their stubbornness exceeds the mule by far. Many breeders do not use geese for setting at all, because they are more difficult to handle than chicken hens. When chicken hens are used they have to be treated with insect powder three to four days before the hatching may be expected. It is also necessary to turn the eggs under chicken hens daily, while geese as sitters are able to turn them without human help.

HOT, FIERY GAS
Stomach Like A Furnace

A Gettysburg man said recently that his stomach used to burn like a "gas factory!" That is, when he ate a meal it seemed to turn right into hot gas. He was always bloated, had gas pains daily. But now this man says he is FREE OF STOMACH GAS and he says the change is due to taking CERTA-VIN. His meals agree with him.

CERTA-VIN is a new formula. Taken before meals it works with your food, expels the gas, and thus you get the fullest good out of your meals. It contains Ten Great Herbs, plus vitamin B and Iron. Besides relieving gas, it also enriches the blood (with iron) and makes stronger nerves (with vitamin B). Miserable people soon feel better all over. So don't go on suffering! Medical Grads Are Leaving This State

Harrisburg, Feb. 21 (AP)—Graduates of Pennsylvania's five medical schools are leaving the Commonwealth to practice at a greater rate than out-of-staters are coming in.

That report came from the joint State Government Commission which estimated that the state is losing 150 graduates a year. The commission is preparing a report for the legislature for use in meeting out funds to the schools.

"The exodus of trained young doctors continues even though Pennsylvania has only one physician to each 730 persons compared to New York with one for each 500," said Rep. Baker Royer (R-Lancaster) commission chairman.

The report estimated that 52 per cent of all graduates of Philadelphia's Jefferson Medical college leave the state to practice. Other schools showed: University of Pennsylvania, 48 per cent leaving; Philadelphia's Hahnemann Medical college, 43 per cent; Temple university, 30 per cent; and 15 per cent from the University of Pittsburgh.

HOT, FIERY GAS
Stomach Like A Furnace

A Gettysburg man said recently that his stomach used to burn like a "gas factory!" That is, when he ate a meal it seemed to turn right into hot gas. He was always bloated, had gas pains daily. But now this man says he is FREE OF STOMACH GAS and he says the change is due to taking CERTA-VIN. His meals agree with him.

CERTA-VIN is a new formula. Taken before meals it works with your food, expels the gas, and thus you get the fullest good out of your meals. It contains Ten Great Herbs, plus vitamin B and Iron. Besides relieving gas, it also enriches the blood (with iron) and makes stronger nerves (with vitamin B). Miserable people soon feel better all over. So don't go on suffering! Chapter 1

At the end of three beautiful warm days even skeptical New York was convinced that though it was still only March it was really spring. People who lived in old-fashioned private houses with back yards flung open their kitchen doors and went out to see if there were any signs of life in trees and bushes, and were not disappointed.

Anne Blake sat in her back yard on a green bench and hummed happily to herself as she shelled peas. She tried to be quick because even old Mary the cook had dawdled in the sun while shopping and even sat a while in a convenient little park.

Anne liked the way the full pods burst under her finger and the way the peas danced in the bowl as if they too knew it was spring. Or maybe they didn't care, since they had come from a place warm enough for vegetables to ripen. Liking warm weather so much herself, she smiled up toward the sunset sky. The last three days had been really beautiful. She was ready for almost anything.

Her quick fingers finished shelling the peas and she sat for a moment dreamily. Several tenement houses overlooked the back yard from the next street, but still, like her father, she could think of it as their garden. The neighborhood had gone down many years ago, but she didn't mind rougher neighbors. As her father had put it in his mild reproof to her sister, "Don't say we live in a slum as if that were the worst thing that could happen to us. A slum merely means that more people live more closely packed together. That can mean warmth and friendliness if you make it mean that."

It was an evening for thinking about things, but Mary came bustling out to get her peas.

"Here you're dreaming, and dinner will never be ready in time. And you know how your father is when you don't feed him on time. Like a hungry bear, I say."

Anne laughed. "You know he only teases you when he's happy."

"Then he must be happy all the time."

Mary was short and fat and shook all over as she hurried about, mumbling about being worked to skin and bones. Anne smiled after her. What would they have done without Mary? Her mumbling and grumbling meant less than nothing, for she was devoted to them. Anne called out that she would set the table and got no answer, but that didn't mean anything either. There was no need to fuss over dinner. She and her father ate simple meals in the kitchen because that made it easier for everybody. Even when her sisters came to a meal it was still in the big kitchen now. The old front dining room had become a sitting room. Upstairs, the old front and back parlors were usually empty. The piano in the back parlor was silent since Celia had married and gone.

"And what is my youngest daughter finding so amusing as she sits in the garden with a lapful of peas pods this lovely spring evening?"

Roger Blake made an unforgettable picture as he stood framed in the old doorway. If it needed painting, he too was shabby, and he quite filled it with his height as well as with his girth. He had a great shock of thick white hair and merry blue eyes. Bearded, he would have been a splendid Santa Claus. Meticulously smooth-shaven as he always was, he was just Roger Blake. It was a part that took up his time all day, every day.

Smiling at him, Anne realized for the thousandth time that she would not have exchanged him for any father in the whole world. She patted the bench beside her.

"Come watch the sunset, Father."

He chuckled in the way she loved and which had always upset both Celia and Adele. "My dreaming girl doesn't see the sun has set. There is merely a pink afterglow in the sky."

"Then we'll enjoy it together, and the twilight. Dinner will be a little delayed."

"Dinner is usually delayed, isn't it?"

A pan banged and Mary denied any such accusation loudly. The big man put both hands to his ears and set down on the bench. He winked at his youngest daughter and put one big hand gently over hers.

Anne felt the peculiar beauty and peace of life as she always did when her father sat beside her and held her hand gently in his. All the things that Celia and Adele wanted out of life seemed so trivial and commonplace. What was success? Why was money so important if it could at best only buy something you already had? It was very peaceful in that ugly back yard that to her father was a garden. Lights came on around them and above them, but there they knew peace.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day.

The lowing herd winds slowly over the lea.

The plowman homeward plods his weary way

And leaves the world to darkness and to me.

She squeezed his fat hand gently. "It is like that, Father."

"Only we know, you and I and your mother, who is always with me when you are with me. She is with us now."

Chapter 2

A rather hard woman's voice came from the open doorway. "I might have known you two would be sitting in the dark pretending it's summer. Don't I get any welcome at all?"

Roger groaned. "My dear Celia, haven't you any gentler moments?"

"Don't you ever have any energetic ones?" she retorted.

Anne leaped up, spilling her pea pods. She ignored them. They could be swept up tomorrow. She threw both arms about her older sister as if to make amends for many things.

"Celia, why didn't you tell us you were coming? You said you were staying in Chicago and—"

Celia kissed her in a way of a woman who used kisses practically and to a purpose. Her voice was still hard, though it was a beautiful voice at the same time.

"Chicago is no good for an actress. New York is where I need to be to get ahead in the world. Don't stare at me and get ready to argue. Say hello to the twins instead. At least make them feel they're welcome."

Anne's eyes lighted up as she turned to them. They stood close together, hands clasped, blue eyes wide with wonder. They were dressed exactly alike. Mary stood back, stirring spoon in hand, staring at them. Anne knelt down and encircled them with her arms.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you both. I haven't seen you since you were babies, and now look at you. Two big strong men."

"Don't tell them about their father. They think he just went away. It's better that way. I can't be bothered trying to explain death to kids when all the theologians don't understand it."

Mary crossed herself and muttered a prayer. The two boys spoke in unison.

"Is our daddy here?"

"Their mother pulled off their caps. 'Can't you see he isn't here?'"

Anne, still kneeling, touched their curly yellow hair into place. "I'm here. And Grandfather is out in the garden. And Mary. Now how do we start getting acquainted? Do we take off coats or kiss first?"

They hesitated, then both held up chubby faces to be kissed. Anne had no chance. They were pulled back to Celia, who bent over them.

"Anne, I don't want you to start spoiling them right away. They need to be trained properly, not cuddled."

She yanked off their coats as she said it. Like released animals they leaped to Anne's waiting arms. Celia's handsome dark eyes flashed.

"I can see how spoiled they'll be inside of a week," she snorted.

Her father spoke quietly from the open doorway which he filled.

"Does that mean you intend honoring us with a week's visit, my dear Celia?"

She faced him her head high. "I have every right to come to stay with my children or anyone I choose to bring with me. This was my mother's house and she left it to all of us."

Roger smiled. "It was left to me, your father, specifically, my dear. I am delighted to welcome you to my house."

He held out his hand genially. She ignored it and caught at the twins, who stopped laughing at her touch.

"Come along. We are being thrust out into the street the same as we were in Chicago as soon as they realize your father didn't leave any more. People are all alike."

The twins pulled away from her and clung to Anne, who caught them both up in her arms and took them out into the yard. Mary brandished her stirring spoon like a soldier preparing for battle.

"Ain't you ashamed to talk to your father like that, Celia Blake? I thought your poor man's death would have taught you some humility and bowed your proud head."

"Nothing will bow my head. I am Celia Gould now and always will be."

"Until you find a new husband. That ain't hard to see."

She shrugged and left the door. He caught her slim highly manicured hands as she passed him.

"You might give your ancient father a kiss, my dear."

She looked away from him. "Do you think it's easy to humiliate myself and come back here?"

He chuckled. "You brought the boys here. You knew Anne would take them her heart."

She quoted the phrase senten-

She marched into the living room to look at the evening paper. Anne brought in the children, who were bubbling with laughter. They climbed onto Roger's lap excitedly.

"She said you'd tell us a story. A big story."

He put his arms about them, chuckling. "What kind of a story shall we have?"

"We want a dog story."

"Splendid." He hugged them. "We'll start with a song. His eyes twinkled and he sang.

Oh where, oh where is my little dog gone?

Oh where, oh where can he be? With his ears cut short and his tail cut long.

Oh where, oh where can he be? The twins clapped their hands. Anne smiled at them. Mary drew a deep breath.

"Ah, it rolls the years back, it does. It takes children to bring sunshine into the house."

Chapter 3

Celia sat at the piano in the back parlor practicing a song. Her fingers were nimble but careless; she had never been one for taking pains even in the days when her father had paid well for good lessons in the hope that there might be a real musician in the family. All she had learned then Celia had not only forgotten but deliberately thrust aside as "classical rot." Now she only played to accompany her voice, which was light, cheerful and commonplace. Roger had refused to pay for vocal lessons, but still her voice had gotten her onto the stage in a bit part. There she had met the rising young actor James Gould whose success was so sure. Now she was his widow and hoping that that same voice would put her back on the stage again. If he had only lived. She stopped singing to heave a sigh. Or if he had only been properly insured.

She banged angry fists on the placid keyboard. Then the turned quickly, sure that someone was watching her. Sure enough, someone was staring there now. He was young, tall, slim, dark, handsome, or she would have been sharper. As it was, she smiled, and her smile could be very sweet when she wanted it to be.

"Were you looking for someone?"

The young man came a step or two into the room and she saw that while his clothes were immaculate, they were cheap clothes. The young man spoke most seriously.

"I came to see Anne. Mary let me in and told me to look up her, since she might be with you."

"Oh." She raised her eyes that no longer felt any need to smile. "You must be Tony Raymond, the boy friend who wants to be a lawyer."

"I am a lawyer."

He said it with a quiet dignity that irritated her. Her eyes flashed. "Do you expect to make money by tip-toeing around people's houses listening to music?"

"I know money is made by hard work. But I also hope I shall never be too busy to stop and listen to a beautiful woman singing a song as sweetly as you were just now."

She caught her breath. "You know how to pay compliments, don't you?"

"I hope I shall always be able to do whatever is necessary."

She got up, annoyed. "I have finished practicing and I have my children to look after. You'll probably find that your Anne has gone to the store. She is always dashing out to the store, because it is the only way she can get out of this dreary house."

"I like this house," he said it carefully and firmly. "Anne and I will probably live here after we're married."

Celia's lip curled. "I'm sure you will. Young lawyers without money have to sleep somewhere, don't they?"

"That's true. Like actresses out of work."

She stepped up to him. "Are you trying to be fresh?"

He smiled slowly. "You look much prettier when you sing."

She might have slapped his face then and there, but the phone rang and, like all theatrical people, she lived for phone calls, any one of which might mean so much.

Tony Raymond went slowly downstairs and back to the kitchen, where Mary was hulling strawberries and humming a hymn cheerfully. She tried to like Tony because Anne loved him and supposedly he loved Anne, though she had her doubts about that. She held up her bowl of hulled berries.

"Better come to dinner, Tony. Broiled chicken, avocado salad, strawberries with cream. Mr. Roger thinks nothing too good for us now the boys are here. He is always bringing things home. I think it will be something special this afternoon, because he has been chuckling to himself all day like the cat that swallowed the canary."

"Do cats chuckle, Mary?"

"I suppose they do. And if not I'm sure they wish they could."

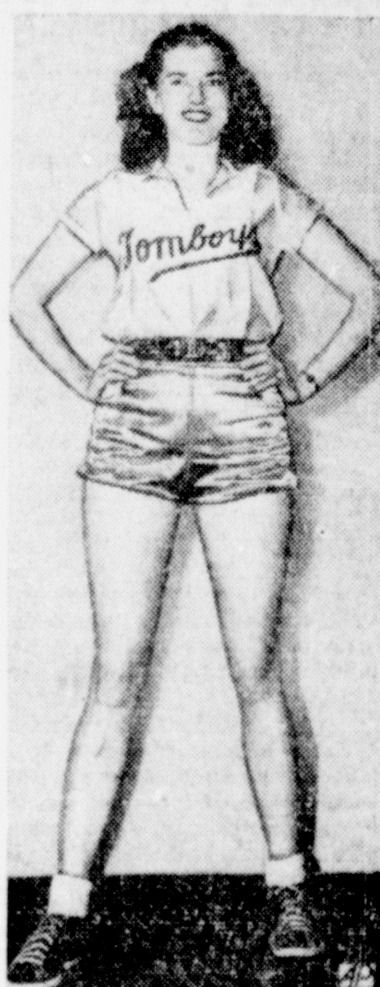

She said it a little sharply because she didn't like Tony when he got smart.

The young lawyer seemed quite oblivious to her dislike. He went to the open door and looked out into the yard where the twins were running and playing. He spoke over his shoulder.

"Doesn't it get on your nerves to have two kids tearing the place up all the time?"

"They don't tear the place up at all. Besides, I wouldn't care if they did. A house is only a true house when it has children in it."

She quoted the phrase sententionally. He laughed and turned away.

"I might as well go home before I get any more unpopular around here. When will Anne come in?"

As if in answer to his question, Anne burst in from the hall holding a big bundle of groceries. She put it down quickly and gave him a hearty kiss and a big hug.

"Tony, I'm so glad to see you. Celia told me you were here. Take your coat off. You're staying for dinner."

Mary cut in sharply. "I just asked him to stay—and he said he had to go home right away."

Anne's eyes twinkled. "That was before I came. Now he has to join the mad Blakes at chow. Do the twins know you're here, Tony?"

Not yet. I saw them first. Or rather, I heard them long before I saw them."

Mary barged a pan. Anne took his arm.

"You know you don't mean that. They took a real shine to you. I told them you were our lawyer and we're going to fight for all poor, distressed people like Sir Galahad. We decided to pick you as our knight."

He sighed. "I wish I were your real knight."

"You are."

Chapter 4

The two boys came shouting into the kitchen to fling themselves at Anne and then with renewed shouts at Tony.

"He's Sir Gallygad. He's our knight. It goes out to fight for us."

Mary added her voice to the clamor, trying to draw the twins' adulation to herself. But her cookie offer went unheeded in the demand for Sir Gallygad to play with them. Anne hugged herself with laughter. Tony groaned his appeal for rescue.

"Can't you call off the wolves?"

The twins caught at the word enthusiastically. Their shrill voices were now supposedly lupine howls. They clung to him.

"We are wolves going to eat up Sir Gallygad."

Mary banged two pans, one in each hand. Anne raised a hand to command silence. The twins hushed instantly without releasing their grips on their hero's hands.

"I am the queen," announced Anne. "I am about to knight this brave young man. Kneel, Tony Raymond."

Tony groaned, "what is this anyway?"

The twins fairly dragged him down, and they knelt on the floor in a row. Anne pulled the big carving knife from its drawer and waved it over her head.

"Bow your head, oh youth at my feet," she commanded.

Tony bowed his head. Anne slapped him on the back with the flat of the knife three times.

"Rise, Sir Tony. Rise and go forth to do noble deeds."

The boys leaped to hug him, shouting, "Rise, Sir Tony." A sharp laugh from the doorway froze them all.

"Well, this beats everything. It looks like a nut house."

The boys shouted at her, "Help us make Sir Tony rise, Mama. He's Sir Gallygad, and Sir Tony and—"

"And a fool," she finished curtly. "Children, look at your hands. Go outside this instant or I'll make you wash and stay upstairs in your room."

Anne touched her arm. "Don't blame them. We're only playing. We are knighting Sir Tony so he can be our knight and fight for us in the world where heroes are always needed."

"Heroes! He'd be more of a hero if he was out trying to earn some money instead of making my children kneel on the dirty floor."

Mary shouted, "This is the cleanest floor around here. You couldn't keep it half as clean your self."

"I'm not a scrub-woman."

Mary yanked off her apron and flung it down. It landed on Tony's head as that ruffled young man was getting up. The twins clapped hands and shouted their delight.

"Sir Tony has a veil. We're wolves again and we'll eat him because he can't see.

They caught his hands and pretended to chew him, but only for a moment. Celia snatched them both and jerked them away, whereat their walls rose in much more realistic fashion. Anne, blocking Mary's exit, was no longer needed as the old cook turned on Celia.

"Don't you dare whip those angel children. I won't let you."

"They are my children, Mary. Hogan. You forget yourself!"

"They ain't yours unless you love 'em and care for 'em."

"They're mine to beat all day if I want to."

She shook them roughly to prove it. Instead of wailing louder, they suddenly stopped as children will when really frightened. Anne jumped in front of Mary. But a still more powerful force intervened. The telephone rang sharply. Celia fairly thrust the children away from her so she could answer it. Anne caught them up, one in each arm and carried them lightly out into the yard.

Mary mumbled a prayer asking forgiveness for having lost her temper again. Tony handed her the apron. She took it and glared at him.

"You should be proud to think little boys run to you."

He smiled slowly. "I don't care much for children."

"Suppose Anne said that. Look at her out there with them now. A real born mother. It should make your heart leap to see that, it should."

He ran a hand over his smooth dark hair. "A man has practical things to think of. Celia's right. I should be working, not playing here."

"And just when, Mr. Raymond, did I give you permission to call me Celia?"

The voice from the doorway was mocking rather than angry. It was obvious the telephone call had been worth dashing for. Tony looked at her steadily.

"You are Celia, aren't you?"

"To my friends, Mr. Raymond."

"That's all I needed to know. Good-bye, Celia. Thanks for the advice about not wasting time."

He bowed and was gone.

"I won't be in to dinner, Mary."

"We're havin' a grand dinner to-night, Celia. Look at the strawberries."

"I've seen strawberries before. Mary. And I shall have a grand dinner myself. I am meeting a producer from Hollywood. Anything can happen now."

"It sure can and the saints preserve us." Mary put her knuckles on her hips boldly. "Sure I'd like to see you play the part of a young mother with two angel boys."

She half expected a slap for her audacity. Instead she got a laugh and a flash of the girl's big dark eyes.

"If I was paid a good salary I'd show you what a mother I could be. If I can interest this man and get to Hollywood—we'll see."

"If I live to be old enough," muttered Mary.

Again Celia laughed, and this time came near and patted Mary's fat old cheek.

"I may surprise you one of these days. Meanwhile remember you once used to call be an angel, too. That was long, long ago."

Blank Cartridge Fells Veteran

Chester, Pa., Feb. 21 (AP)—A 23-year-old army veteran is held on charges of assault and possessing a deadly weapon today in a dispute of the wrecking of his model house at a GI carpentry school.

Police gave this version of events leading up to the arrest of Milton Hodges: Hodges found his model house wrecked when he entered the school classroom yesterday. He accused another student, James Gilbert, 34, and fired point blank at him with a foreign-made pistol.

Gilbert fell to the floor while other classmates disarmed Hodges. Hodges insisted Gilbert was not actually shot—that the gun had contained only a blank cartridge.

CATTLE—Fresh receipts were estimated at 1,200 head compared with an actual count of 1,074 a week ago and 1,291 a month ago. Supply received same day last year totaled 1,226. In addition to fresh supply there were approximately 150 head on sale that were held from last week. Salable supply fully ample for demand and trading was slow throughout the session. In all departments, medium and good short-fed steers again formed bulk of salable offerings with choice kinds relatively scarce. Included in run was equivalent of 20 loads of slaughter steers and 8 loads of stock cattle. Balance of receipts mainly cows and bulls.

Slaughter steers again met an uneven trade and moved scaleward slowly. Salemen in opening rounds tried for higher prices but most sales were generally steady compared with last Thursday's market. Bulk of medium and good, $24.50—26.50. Few small lots, $27 and $27.50. Few scattered lots of common and low-medium, $22.50—24. One small lot of good around 950-pound mixed yearlings, $25.50.

Heders again relatively small supply. Run consisted mainly of odd-head and small-lot shipments and made up largely of common and mediums. Few good heifers, $24.25—25. Most of the common and medium, $20—22.50. Odd-canner grade heifers, $17 or under.

Cows also met a slow trade, and sold unevenly but generally steady with last Thursday. In some instance though, advances of 25-50c, were chalked up, particularly on lower grade offerings. Good

SOCIAL MEDICINE DOCTOR'S TOPIC

More than 150 were in attendance at the Brotherhood meeting in St. Mary's Reformed church, Silver Run, on Sunday evening, when Dr. Leonard L. Potter, Littlestown, discussed "Socialized Medicine." He said: "The idea of socialized medicine was first begun by Bismarck in Germany in 1883. New Zealand tried the plan in 1939 and Britain's plan went into effect in 1948. Nations who have tried this plan found that there was a lowering of the quality of medical care. In Germany and New Zealand, the average length of illness increased during the operation of the plan, while in the United States, during the same period of time, the average days of illness decreased, in some instances in greater proportion than the amount of increase in foreign lands.

He stressed the exceeding high cost of the plan, Britain found the estimated cost for 12 months had to be increased by 80 per cent, while New Zealand found that the cost was 40 per cent of the total government revenue.

"Compared to this great inefficiency and expense," he said, "the health conditions in America under our present system have been most favorable. Deaths caused by diseases such as diphtheria and small pox have practically disappeared.

The average length of days spent per illness has decreased 3½ times that of 1920. In 1946, the average American family spent $50 for medical care. In 1947, the whole sum of America's medical care wasn't one half of the amount spent on tobacco, nor one fifth the amount spent on alcoholic beverages. "Here in America," he continued, "we have the best medical care in the world. We have one doctor for every 750 people, compared to England's one doctor for every 800. In America, there is practically no waiting line for hospital care, and emergency cases are taken care of immediately. Under national health program, physicians aren't given adequate time to examine and make thorough diagnosis of their patients, hence the quality of the care decreases."

Recommends Insurance

The speaker called attention to weaknesses in the report on health conditions requested by the president in 1948. He said: "The report claimed that the fact that five million men were disqualified for armed service from 1941 to 1946 showed the inadequacy of present health service.

"Of this amount," he noted, "only six per cent could have been helped by medical care. The report also claimed that the middle class was the class unable to provide adequate medical care. But in light of the amount spent in 1946 of $50 on the average, and the total amount of our medical care costing only one half the amount spent on tobacco," the speaker reasoned, that the middle class people can afford adequate medical care if they desire it.

As a better way of meeting what inadequacies of medical care we now have, the speaker commended, voluntary health insurance plans and pointed out that for as low as 20 cents a day, the average family could have protection that would pay the majority of their hospital and doctor bills in the event of major illnesses. This would be cheaper than the National Health Act which would take from two to six per cent of the income of each wage earner. "Such a plan," he said, "will not bring politics between the doctor and the patient, but leaves the doctor-patient relationship untouched and free."

He also pointed out that "the physicians are against this plan not for any selfish reason. The government assures them a higher income if the plan be put into effect. But the government," he said, "does not assure them the opportunity to render the same conscientious service that their profession
